Context

- National projections show a rising urgent and emergency care demand profile across winter 2022/23 with current pressures compounded by a resurgence of flu and respiratory illnesses and waning COVID-19 antibodies in the population. While the demand profile for Norfolk and Waveney has been below forecasts for the previous two winters and increases are expected this year following a summer with no easing of pressure.
- Most 'on the day' urgent health care is delivered through the primary care rout, but practices are struggling to meet demand despite an uplift in appointments offered. Similarly surges in mental health demand have been outstripping capacity resulting in increased attendances at ED and delays in accessing care.
- Pressures are expected to be compounded by the impact of the cost-of-living crisis which is placing many more at greater risk of hardship and reduced opportunity of health and well-being and may result in increasing hospital admissions for respiratory related illnesses following spells of cold weather.
- Patient flow across the health system has been increasingly concerning with discharges delayed across all patient pathways and length of stay increasing in our acute, mental health and community hospitals.
- Norfolk and Waveney ICS has been awarded £11m to increase "bed" and / or "bed equivalent" capacity to improve and speed up discharge which in turn will speed up admission to hospital reducing ambulance delays in offloading at our Emergency Departments.
- Workforce recruitment and retention issues are risks for this winter along with the threat of industrial action across the health sector and beyond.
- Health and Social Care have developed a joint winter plan which maximises opportunities to link people with a range of services across statutory and VCSE providers, to maintain personal resilience and promote independence.
